

ABSTRACT

[0030] A system for cataloging a digital image created by a digital camera includes a character string. The system further includes a character input device subject to receive the character string. A memory file, which stores the digital image in the digital camera, is identified by the character string.